MEMORANDUM

TO: Atlantic Menhaden Technical Committee
FROM: Robert Ballou, Chair of the Atlantic Menhaden Management Board
DATE: October 30, 2017
SUBJECT: Stock Projections for the Interim Reference Point Options in Draft Amendment 3

In a memo dated October 4, 2017, the Technical Committee (TC) provided the Atlantic Menhaden Management Board (Board) with projections associated with the various reference point options in Draft Amendment 3. The memo is responsive to the Board's August 2017 tasking of the TC.

Since the August meeting, public comments have revealed considerable public support for two reference point alternatives: Option B: BERP Workgroup Continues to Develop Menhaden-Specific ERPs with Interim Use of Single Species Reference Points, and Option E: BERP Workgroup Continues to Develop Menhaden-Specific ERPs with Interim Use of 75% Target, 40% Threshold. The October 2017 TC memo provides projections which show the Total Allowable Catch (TAC) associated with a 50% probability of being below the F-target for Options B and E in 2018. For reference point Option B, that TAC is 314,500 mt. For reference point Option E, that TAC is 147,200 mt.

The projections are responsive to the Board's initial request, and useful for the Board's consideration. However, members of the Board and Advisory Panel have commented that additional information regarding reference point Option E would help inform the Board as it weighs the options and considers the establishment of a TAC for 2018. In particular, there have been requests to better understand: 1) the level of risk associated with the current TAC of 200,000 mt; and 2) the TAC associated with the F-threshold.

For the reasons given above, I am requesting that the TC please provide the Board with two additional projections associated with reference point Option E prior to the November 13-14 Board meeting in Baltimore. Please do so using the same methods and assumptions that were used in the October 2017 memo. The two additional projections regarding Option E are:

- 1) The percent risk of a 200,000 mt TAC exceeding the F-target and F-threshold in 2018.
- 2) The TAC that has a 50% probability of being below the F-threshold in 2018.

I thank the TC for its excellent work and continuing support as the Board prepares to address the several important and challenging issues included in Draft Amendment 3.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Atlantic Menhaden Management Board
FROM: Atlantic Menhaden Technical Committee
DATE: November 3, 2017
SUBJECT: Amended Stock Projections Memo for Draft Amendment 3

At the August meeting, the Atlantic Menhaden Management Board (Board) tasked the Atlantic Menhaden Technical Committee (TC) with developing projections for the various reference point options in Draft Amendment 3. Specifically, the Board requested projections which show the total allowable catch (TAC) associated with a 50% probability of being below the F-target in 2018. In an October 30th memo to the TC, the Board, via the Board Chair, requested the following two projections be completed in regard to reference point Option E:

- 1) The percent risk of a 200,000 metric ton TAC exceeding the F-target and F-threshold in 2018.
- 2) The TAC that has a 50% probability of being below the F-threshold in 2018.

All projections use the same methods described in the benchmark and update stock assessments. The fishing mortality time series was converted to a biomass weighted fishing mortality using the calculations as presented in the BERP memo and in Amendment 3. Landings for 2017 were constant at the amount specified for the 2017 TAC. The allocation between northern and southern reduction and bait landings was the same as allocated in Amendment 2. All calculations were done using the latest results from the 2017 stock assessment update. To make all reference points comparable, F values are reported below as biomass-weighted averages over the entire population. For example, the reference points from the 2017 stock assessment update presented below represent the same level of fishing pressure, but the values differ from the mean F values over ages 2-4 you may be accustomed to seeing. Options below are labeled identically to draft Amendment 3 for consistency. There are a number of comments and caveats regarding the projections and calculation of these reference points, which are found below.

Methods

Data into and output from the Monte Carlo bootstrap (MCB) runs of the base run of the Beaufort Assessment Model (BAM) were used as the basis for the projections within this document (see stock assessment report for details on base run and MCB runs). Projections were run for a total of 2 years with constant landings (2017-2018). The starting conditions of the projection analysis include initial numbers at age, which were the estimated numbers at age, N_a , for year 2017 from the BAM for each MCB run.

Numbers at age after the initial year were calculated as:

$$N_{a+1,y+1} = N_{a,y} e^{-Z_{a,y}}$$

where Z was age and year specific mortality and equals natural mortality for each age for that year plus the fishing mortality rate times the selectivity at age. The vector for natural mortality for each projection was the vector from each MCB run. Selectivity was a vector from each MCB run for each fishery with the northern and southern commercial reduction fishery selectivities being the values in the last time period. Fishing mortality was estimated using the optimize function in R in order to match the annual landings (level of landings denoted above). Annual landings were calculated using the Baranov catch equation and weight of landings.

Recruitment was projected without an underlying stock-recruitment function and was based on the median recruitment observed in each MCB run. Recruitment variability was included whereby for each year a deviation in recruitment was selected randomly with replacement from the deviations estimated in each MCB run.

Notes on Projection Methodology:

As usual, projections should be interpreted in light of the model assumptions and key aspects of the data. Some major considerations are the following:

- Fisheries were assumed to continue fishing at their estimated current proportions of total effort, using the estimated current selectivity patterns. New management regulations that alter those proportions or selectivities would likely affect projection results.
- If future recruitment is characterized by runs of large or small year classes, possibly due to environmental or ecological conditions, stock trajectories may be affected.
- Projections apply the Baranov catch equation to relate F and landings using a one-year time step, as in the assessment. The catch equation implicitly assumes that mortality occurs throughout the year. This assumption is violated when seasonal closures are in effect, introducing additional and unquantified uncertainty into the projection results.
- In general, projections of fish stocks are highly uncertain, particularly in the long term (e.g., beyond 5 years).
- Although projections included many major sources of uncertainty, they did not include structural (model) uncertainty. That is, projection results are conditional on one set of functional forms used to describe population dynamics, selectivity, recruitment, etc.

Notes on Interim Reference Point Calculations:

- Even after consultation with the authors of Pikitch et al. (2012), it was not readily apparent to either group how best to translate reference points derived from an Ecopath-with-Ecosim meta-analysis to an age-structured single species framework. This is a novel application rather than standard practice.
- These calculations are based on knowing B_0 and thus the absolute scale of the population. As indicated in the population scale shift from the updated BAM assessment, which is not uncommon in many assessments, the absolute scale of the population and thus B_0 are highly uncertain for menhaden. As a result, the expected performance of management measures may be different than what is projected depending on the magnitude of the uncertainty associated with B_0 .

- The ecosystem models used in Pikitch et al. (2012) to develop biomass and fishing mortality reference points assumed constant selectivity over the entire population or over all adult size classes for the forage groups. The Atlantic Menhaden BAM model uses a dome-shaped selectivity where the oldest age classes are less vulnerable to the fishery than the middle age classes. Thus, the ecosystem models used in Pikitch et al. (2012) make fundamentally different assumptions about the behavior of the fisheries and the effects of fishing on forage fish populations than the BAM assessment and thus the projections.
- The Working Group (WG) has concerns about the use of reference points that preserve a certain proportion of total biomass instead of spawning stock biomass or fecundity, because they may result in a level of spawning potential well below the FEC limit. For menhaden, age 0 and 1 represent a significant proportion of the total biomass, but do not contribute to the spawning population, and are not targeted by the fishery. Therefore, the level of fishing pressure that reduces total biomass to 40% B_0 is higher than almost anything seen in the history of the fishery and results in almost total loss of spawning adults.
- Although biomass-weighted F_s allow comparison across different types of reference points, they are averaged across the entire population, including the unexploited biomass of ages 0 and 1. This means that the population average F is lower than the F experienced by the most heavily exploited age groups, even for values of fully recruited F , which would be considered unachievable or unrealistically high in an age-structured framework.

Projections Options A and B – Single species reference points from 2017 Stock Assessment Update

The TAC that resulted in a 50% probability of being below the F target in 2018 was 314,500 mt (Table 1; Figure 1).

Table 1. Percent risk of a 314,500 mt TAC exceeding F_{target} (0.408) or $F_{threshold}$ (1.164) in 2018.

Percent risk of exceeding F_{target}	50%
Percent risk of exceeding $F_{threshold}$	5%

These reference points were calculated as per the 2017 stock assessment update, but in order to be comparable to the biomass-weighted interim reference points, the biomass-weighted average F_s have been provided instead of the geometric mean over ages 2-4.

Projections Option C – Pikitch et al. (2012) reference points

The TAC that resulted in a 50% probability of being below the F target of 0.041 in 2018 was 40,500 mt (Table 2; Figure 2).

Table 2. Percent risk of a 40,500 mt TAC exceeding F_{target} (0.041) or $F_{\text{threshold}}$ (0.367) in 2018.

	2018
Percent risk of exceeding F_{target}	50%
Percent risk of exceeding $F_{\text{threshold}}$	0%

As a reminder, Pikitch et al. (2012) recommends management actions for species in the “intermediate information tier” (previously determined for Atlantic menhaden by the WG, 2015) in the form of applying a hockey stick harvest control rule with $B_{\text{LIM}} \geq 0.4B_0$ (B_0 = unfished biomass) and $F \leq 0.5 * M$. In this scenario, fishing would be prohibited when biomass levels fall below 40 percent of unfished biomass. When biomass is greater than 40 percent of unfished biomass, the fishing mortality would not exceed half the natural mortality rate and would depend on how large the population is relative to B_0 . To calculate F target rates at $40\%B_0 < B < B_0$, a straight line was fitted between $F=0$ at $40\%B_0$ and $F=0.5M$ at $100\%B_0$.

Projections Options D and E – 75% Unfished Biomass

The TAC that resulted in a 50% probability of being below the F target of 0.160 in 2018 was 147,200 mt (Table 3; Figure 3).

Table 3. Percent risk of a 147,200 mt TAC exceeding F_{target} (0.160) or $F_{\text{threshold}}$ (1.493) in 2018.

	2018
Percent risk of exceeding F_{target}	50%
Percent risk of exceeding $F_{\text{threshold}}$	0%

For Options D and E, the F reference points that achieve specific percentages of unfished biomass, we use biomass per-recruit calculations from the assessment model to estimate biomass-weighted F rates that achieve 40% and 75% unfished biomass per recruit. This produces a full F that can be translated to a biomass-weighted average F for comparison with the $F=0.5 M$ reference points. For comparison of reference points, the equilibrium biomass-at-age under that level of F is used to weight the full F.

Additional Projections for Option E – 75% Target and 40% Threshold

The probability of exceeding the F target in 2018 under a TAC of 200,000 mt is 88%. The probability of exceeding the F-threshold is 0%.

Table 4. Percent risk of exceeding the F target (0.160) and F threshold (1.493) under a 200,000 mt TAC in 2018.

	2018
Percent risk of exceeding F_{target}	88%
Percent risk of exceeding $F_{\text{threshold}}$	0%

The TAC that resulted in a 50% probability of being below the F threshold of 1.493 in 2018 was 744,900 mt.

Table 5. Percent risk of a 744,900 mt TAC exceeding F_{target} (0.160) or $F_{\text{threshold}}$ (1.493) in 2018.

Percent risk of exceeding $F_{\text{threshold}}$	50%

RE: Allocation Decisions Under Amendment 3 to the Interstate Fishery Management Plan for Atlantic Menhaden

Dear Messrs. Beal and Ballou:

As the Atlantic States Marine Fisheries Commission's legislative appointee for the Commonwealth of Virginia and a member of the Atlantic Menhaden Management Board, I am gravely concerned about a number of the options in Amendment 3 that would deprive my state's fishing industry of its historic share of the menhaden resource. The Commission's own scientists have indicated that the menhaden resource is highly abundant and could withstand harvest levels up to 314,500 metric tons under standards widely utilized by federal fisheries managers. As such, there is ample room to raise the annual total allowable catch and provide increased allocations for historic bait fisheries in other states.

As you are aware, Virginia supports such an alternative, Option F in the draft amendment. Under Option F, Virginia voluntarily agrees to forgo a significant percentage of the allocation share it is entitled to under Amendment 2 to foster increased fishing opportunities for other states. This offer is contingent, however, on each and every state, the Commonwealth included, being made whole from the 20% reduction imposed on each state in 2013.

So long as the Board continues to manage the menhaden resource as if it requires conservation—that is, so long as the TAC remains below the 212,500 mt threshold from which the 20% reduction was taken—the ASMFC's governing authorities require that each state contribute equally. The ISFMP Charter and the Commission's Rules and Regulations are designed to protect states like Virginia from majoritarian action.

As should be clear by this point, Virginia's representatives on the Commission believe that the alternatives which guarantee each state a "fixed minimum" amount of quota, including those like Pennsylvania, South Carolina, and Georgia with no fishery, are flatly illegal. Even if they were not, it is simply inequitable and unjust to give states an allocation for which those with fisheries would have to horse-trade.

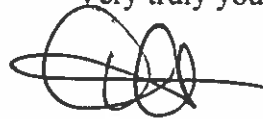

It is also critical that the Commission follow the repeated written advice of its technical experts regarding the management approach used to set reference points. The Menhaden Technical Committee has explained the Commission will jeopardize the spawning adults in a thriving stock of fish by managing it using a method that is not suitable for menhaden.

In closing, I want to be very clear that if the Menhaden Board engages in an unprincipled reallocation, or ignores its own scientists, I will not support in my committee the Commission's recommendations. As you know, the General Assembly has regulatory authority over the Commonwealth's menhaden fishery. Under the federal Atlantic Coastal Fisheries Cooperative Management Act, a state is not subject to sanctions for failure to adopt a recommendation unless the Secretary of Commerce finds that the management measure is "necessary for the conservation of the fishery in question."

There is simply no need to place the ASMFC's processes at risk over a resource that is as abundant as Atlantic menhaden. The Board should both follow the scientific advice provided by its own experts and adopt a TAC for next year on the order of a still very conservative 240,000 mt, as the industry has urged. A quota at that level will provide ample fish for those states that wish to take advantage of high local abundance.

I look forward to seeing you both in Baltimore next month.

Very truly yours,

Re: Menhaden Amendment 3

Dear Ms. Ware,

I support the immediate adoption of ecological reference points in Amendment 3 to the Interstate Fishery Management Plan for Atlantic Menhaden, Issue 2.6 "Option E."

Atlantic menhaden play a vital role in the marine food web as forage fish that feed a multitude of species including gamefish, marine mammals and seabirds. As key prey for these and other species, Atlantic menhaden are a critical backbone for our coastal communities, including the many businesses and wildlife-viewing opportunities they support on and off the water.

Managing Atlantic menhaden through Option E prioritizes their role as forage fish, allowing the resource to continue to grow and increase in value to recreational fishing, commercial fishing, and wildlife and tourism businesses.

Amendment 3 should follow the best science available today and adopt ecological reference points now, by passing Issue 2.6, Option E, which provides for the needs of predators and is a commonsense way to manage this valuable public resource to the benefit of every Atlantic state from Maine to Florida.

Sincerely,
